June 28, 1934.

Board of Education
Plainfield, New Jersey.

Gentlemen:

My annual report for 1933-34 is submitted at the end of the school year with a conviction that the teaching force has never rendered more adequate or successful services to the children and youth of Plainfield. Supervisors and teachers have responded wholeheartedly to the challenge of the abnormal social and economic conditions by increasing their efforts not only in the field of teaching, but also from the broader human aspect of creating a positive, interesting and cheerful school atmosphere to compensate for the many unfavorable home conditions induced by continued unemployment.

Teachers, administrative employees, and janitors have contributed  $3\frac{1}{2}\%$  of their salaries in the total amount of \$26,015.92 to the Children's Relief Committee. The Committee has spent \$7,322.50 in wages to 20 employees and \$13,163.18 for food and supplies to provide one full balanced meal each day of the week except Sunday to approximately 900 pupils.

Although statistical proof is lacking, principals and teachers are in general agreement that pupils from schools in the poorest districts are healthier and better nourished than in normal times, when none were fed. In addition to relieving hunger the Committee has rendered a service which there is no means of measuring. Malnutrition causes a progressive reduction of vitality which exposes the individual to further devitalizing diseases. Without doubt, the Committee has insured future health protection to the several hundred children served during the year.

During the summer, milk will be delivered to the houses of the most needy cases to supplement the home diet.

Enrollment and Housing

The average enrollment of the elementary grades was 5,183 and high school 1,755, a total of 6,938. The respective enrollments last year were 5,224 and 1,674, with a total of 6,898. The number in the grades shows a decrease of 41 and the high school an increase of 81.

Our grade school enrollment is following the general downward trend of the country. The growth in our population which came a few years ago from real estate developments has been practically stopped for the past four years. A marked reduction in the local birth rate is becoming a further factor in reducing increases in enrollment.

I use the October 1 record of enrollments as a basis of comparison in determining housing accommodations. Below is given a table of grade enrollments from 1927 to 1933.

Grand totals - all grades	6322	6529	6565	6685	6762	6981	6981

A study of the figures reveals two significant trends. The elementary enrollment increases up to 1930 and then diminishes. The number in the High School from 1927 to 1931 shows the same gradual increase followed by an unusual growth. In the period of six years while the elementary enrollment increases but 17, the High School has a remarkable increase of 642.

In considering the need for new building accommodations, we must determine whether unusual high school growth has come to a peak. The indications are that it has. For the last three years economic conditions have been such that practically all pupils of high school age have remained in school. An estimate for the school year 1934-35 shows that 1850 will probably enroll. The numbers at present enrolled in grades 1 — 8 do not show that there will be any greater demand for continuance in High School than has been present for the last few years, and, until changed economic conditions cause increased population in Plainfield, it is questionable whether the school population will show any great increase.

Ten years ago the ratio of the number of high school pupils to the total enrollment was 13.8%. If the same ratio obtained now, the October 1933 High School enrollment would have been 963 instead of 1847. In 1929 (October 1) the ratio was 19.19% which if continued, would have brought about an enrollment of 1,390. The present ratio is 26.4%, or very near to the point where all pupils are continuing into high school.

By the addition of one period to the school day, considerable flexibility was added to the plant and program, and, although conditions are by no means ideal, the pupils have been accommodated without undue harm to the school program.

The undesirable features at present are home room seating, study room conditions, and lack of shoproom facilities for boys. Pupils study in classrooms, in the cafeteria, and the auditorium. There are some periods when there are probably too many studying in the cafeteria. The auditorium is used five periods a day by 570 pupils, each of whom studies there for one period only.

The shops are being used under a maximum schedule with large classes.

For easy and desirable administration of the school, an enrollment of 1,600 is probably a maximum figure. When it is estimated that the enrollment next year will be 1850 in September and drop later in the year to 1,800 or less, a reduction of 200 in enrollment is indicated as necessary to bring about relief.

Additions to the Hubbard and Maxson Schools to make them junior high schools are a part of the building program to provide for growth in the 7 — 12 grades in the system. The Hubbard School is nearest to the largest number of ninth grade pupils who might be transferred from the High School building to institute the first partial unit of the junior high school. If it is decided that reducing the number in the High School by more than 200 is unnecessary, the question of what pupils would go to the 9th grade in the Hubbard School arises. Of a total of 501 in the present 8th grade, there are 287 who live near enough to attend. When this number is split into the different courses which would be pursued by the students, the cost of their education would be disproportionately large in comparison to the present arrangement.

It would be possible to send only pupils of certain courses, which would reduce the numbers so little that the addition would be too small to be feasible, as it is probably best to make a large unit when adding to the Hubbard School.

Dull Normal Pupils

In my last annual report I mentioned the problem of providing education to suit the needs and abilities of the increased numbers of pupils characterized as "dull" and "dull normal" types. At the present writing, opportunities for employment, social trends and legislation seem to indicate that the problem will not be solved by agencies or conditions outside the schools. The foregoing estimate that in the last ten years the ratio of continuance into high school has doubled is an indication of size and complexity of problem. In round numbers on the basis of ten years ago, our high school enrollment would be 900 instead of 1,800.

During the year, under the leadership of Mrs. Anita S. Quarles, former member of our Board, a local committee of the Big Brother and Big Sister Federation was formed in Plainfield. Mrs. Quarles became interested in this organization while engaged in her duties as referee of the Union County Juvenile Court. The members of the local committee have given valuable service as Big Brothers to delinquent boys, as shown by a report of Miss Dorothy S. Putnam, which is printed herein.

The committee soon became aware of school failure of dull pupils as a contributing factor to delinquency and after holding meetings in which expert advice was given, submitted a request to the Board of Education in April that efforts be made to provide education adapted to the needs of the non-academic type.

I was directed to make a study of conditions and report recommendations. With some curtailment, the following is a copy of the report submitted in May.

"The inception of the idea of the report made to the Board of Education in a letter submitted at the April meeting by the Big Brother Executive Committee, came from a statement of Judge Waldman of the Union County Juvenile Court that a large amount of juvenile delinquency could be attributed to the public schools. No doubt his judgment is based on many inquiries directed by him or his agents to juvenile offenders. Probably, the most frequently recurring statement is that the school work does not interest the boys and girls of the potentially delinquent type because too much time is spent on academic work which is beyond their abilities. Continuing failure is the result. Pupils become ugly and discouraged. Truancy follows. This makes the individual a delinquent and he may either be placed on probation, or, for repeated offenses, become an institutional case. In some instances, truancy is not repeated and he ceases to offend the laws of the State in this or other respects. However, in many cases rebellion against the school control is but the first of a number of delinquencies which break other laws established by society. The worst cases continue a record of many years of arrests and institutional incarceration, ending in the commission of major crimes and commitment to Trenton State Prison.

"In my years of teaching experience, I have been deeply interested in this type of pupil. It is my opinion that there is evidence as early as the third or fourth year of the school life of some of the most unbalanced cases that not only will the school fail in training them for normal stable citizenship, but other and succeeding agencies such as probationary courts as well as corrective and penal institutions, will be unable to overcome inherent and acquired characteristics. As a result they become almost a continuous burden on society, and, during periods of freedom, a menace as well.

"Therefore, before we start to examine the schools for the progress that could be made to improve conditions for the failure type of pupil, I think the assumption should be made that as long as we continue under a five-hour day and a five-day week control for a period of about 190 days a year, we will continue to fail with many of the so-called delinquents.

"With the lowest type, I can see no solution but the establishment of some kind of school which will assume total parental care for a varying period of years. Such a school should not be a corrective or punitive institution in the accepted sense of the word. It should substitute a friendly, healthy, constructive atmosphere for unbalanced home conditions and the destructive environment of poverty. Probably, such schools or homes should extend opportunity beyond the delinquent type to those children who do not become delinquent but become human failures in adult society and, while they may not commit criminal acts, are, nevertheless, a social burden.

"For several years there has been definite supervisory emphasis on educating and changing teacher attitude toward pupils who are backward academically. I think there is a quite general acceptance of the educational philosophy that boys and girls who cannot meet the academic standards should have every possible consideration and sympathy from their teachers. As a result, I am sure there has been a definite improvement in the human relations between teachers and pupils. Classroom discipline has changed so that institutional authority and pressure are not relied upon for control of the pupils.

"There has been a general attempt in classroom procedure to meet the individual needs and abilities of the pupils. Grouping of pupils according to ability within the classes has been extensively practiced, especially in the first four grades. The teachers have attempted to give each pupil in their classes a feeling of achievement and success.

"A large number of backward pupils do not have reading readiness at the usual chronological age. Provision has been made for them in several of the schools by the formation of pre-primary classes in which is carried on a type of work similar to that of the kindergarten, but extended to meet the somewhat greater maturity.

"In addition to the grouping within a grade, the Bryant School has conducted an experiment of taking backward children from the second, third and fourth grades and grouping them in one class and has also been conducting a pre-primary class. The Emerson School has been carrying on a similar project with three such classes made up of pupils from the first through the eighth grades. In these classes the study and methods have been modified to meet the abilities of the individual pupils. More time has been given to the training of the motor abilities of the children.

"No provision has been made for more time in the shops because the present number of shop teachers is not large enough to make the time available for these special groups. Four years ago, a part-time manual training teacher was employed for the Lincoln and Washington Schools to provide more handwork instruction, but on account of the curtailment of the budget, it was necessary to dispense with his services.

"The increase in recent years in High School enrollment has made the problem more acute than in the other grades. However, progress has been made in the last four or five years toward its partial solution. Probably the greatest change has been the increase in the number of pupils making the proper selection of courses immediately on entrance to the High School.

"The Industrial Arts Course, in addition to general cultural education, provides a varied educational training in the use of tools and machines, handling and shaping materials, and information concerning trades and industries. There are not enough shops or teachers available to increase the shop time for a large number who should be spending more time in handwork and less in the other subjects, with the exception of a group of 40 pupils of the lowest level with whom we have been conducting an experiment this year.

"A summary of the recommendations of the principals shows that 5 additional special teachers could be effectively used in the Jefferson, Maxson, Evergreen and High Schools.

With their employment, and construction of the shops for the High School, considerable progress could be made in improving the program of instruction in hand work."

Costs

During the past two years, we have seen the National Recovery Administration and the increase in the age limit for compulsory attendance further enlarge the obligation of the public schools. When almost all children between the ages of 4 and 18 are being educated as a public cooperative enterprise, it is obvious that the aggregate cost will be large.

In previous reports I have stated the record of the tax rate for school purposes and cited the fact that the rate started to decrease after 1925, four years before the economic crash. Through a further increase in the contributions of salaries of employees to 11½ %, and other economies, the tax rate per $100.00 of assessed valuation for current operation for the year was reduced to $0.86 from $1.09. Below is a record of the rates from some previous years.

1.24	1.14	1.15	1.16	1.19	1.09	.86	.98

The tax rate of $0.98 given above is for the next school year, (1934-35). It is 12 points more not because the budget was increased, but because of decreases in state aid. Litigation and the with-holding of payment of a portion of taxes by some railroads have so reduced the amounts available from this source, that no receipts are anticipated in the budget. With the exception of relatively small amounts to be received from manual training, continuation school and vocational training, the entire cost of the system will be met from local taxation. Since the State does not return as much of the the 2 mils tax as is raised, Plainfield, in fact, becomes a net contributor to education in other parts of the State. Attempts to have legislation passed to relieve taxes on real estate have failed. It is quite probable that the urgency of the needs in the State will compel that new taxes be levied.

The school system has now passed through a period of three years of curtailment and retrenchment. In the meantime, there has been no great increase in the total enrollment, but the High School has increased from 1,396 in 1930-31 to 1,755 in 1933-34, which has created both administrative and supervisory problems. The number of teachers has been decreased with the result that the average size of classes shows an increase over previous years.

No teacher's or other employee's salary has been increased for three years and all teachers and employees are entering the school year of 1934-35 with no change in salary.

With the upward trend of living costs, those teachers who have been employed at minimum or low salaries should soon cease to be asked to contribute a part of their salaries; instead, for the good of the progress of the system, their salaries should be increased. An emergency state law prevents any increase being made to the salaries of any municipal or board of education employee. This law should be repealed immediately so that latitude may be allowed boards of education to make salary adjustments for service and ability.

Retirement of Mr. Best

Lindsey Best, principal of the Plainfield High School for 25 years, retired from service at the end of the year. My regret that our enjoyable years of work together have ended, is somewhat compensated by the satisfaction and pleasure that he leaves the school system with such a superior record as high school principal.

A copy of the resolution on his retirement passed by the Board in appreciation of his years of service, is printed below :

WHEREAS, Lindsey Best has decided to retire from the principalship of the Plainfield High School at the end of this school year after completing eight years as a teacher in the school and twenty-five years as its principal, be it

RESOLVED: That in accepting his resignation, the Board of Education takes this opportunity to express its deep appreciation of the long and valued services rendered to the youth of Plainfield.

He has developed and maintained a standard of professional excellence for the school which has established for it a high reputation among the secondary schools of the state and country.

His genial personality, his high ethical standards, and his qualities of leadership have been generously recognized by his fellow high school principals, the teachers under his supervision and the parents of the many boys and girls whose education he has guided. Be it further

RESOLVED: That we extend to him our full recognition and gratitude for his excellent services and our wishes for many years of health and happiness, and be it further

RESOLVED: That this resolution be spread upon the minutes and that an engrossed copy be sent to Mr. Best.

Respectfully submitted,

F. W. COOK

Superintendent of Schools.

ANNUAL REPORT

ATTENDANCE DEPARTMENT

BOARD OF EDUCATION, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

To the Board of Education:

The Social Work Year Book of 1933 says, "The enforcement of compulsory education as a child-helping service has been sadly handicapped by the popular belief, shared rather generally by teachers, that such service is largely a police function. A changing point of view in this particular is illustrated in the Pennsylvania law which now permits the appointment of home-school visitors to be certified by the Department of Public Instruction in lieu of attendance officers." Though the term "attendance officer" is still applied in New Jersey, we attendance workers are attempting to give truant and delinquent children the benefit of intelligent and sympathetic service in adjusting their problems, since truancy is now recognized as merely a symptom of a complex educational, social, or individual situation needing help.

To this end, we have organized a special case committee this year to make a study of a few problem children and their difficulties. The plan originated with the National Big Brother and Sister Organization and was carried out by the untiring efforts of local citizens who willingly gave their help at the request of Mrs. Quarles, then a member of your Board. A survey of problem school children revealed fifty who would benefit by special help, but too large a number to start with. Finally twelve of the worst problems, all boys, were selected and for each a friendly visitor was appointed. The children's ages ranged from nine to fifteen: one was nine, three were fourteen, and one was fifteen, one was ten, five were twelve, one was thirteen. Their grades ranged from second to seventh: two were in second, four in fourth, two in fifth, one in sixth, one in seventh, and two were in Special Opportunity classes.

Nine had psychiatric examinations and, so far as possible the recommendations in these tests were carried out. In a recent re-check after a year of supervision, marked improvement in all cases has been shown. Such recommendations as "special reading helps, eyes tested, transfer to special classes, ignore attention-getting habits, tonsilectomy, basal metabolism, special arithmetic help," and many others were suggested by the psychiatrist.

One boy was given special reading help and is now selecting books voluntarily, has a card at the library, and gets books for his sister as well as himself. His interest in school has increased and attendance improved. He has stopped begging and pan-handling on the street and has shown great improvement in his attitude at home. Another boy will go on a free membership to Bonnie Brae camp this summer and a third boy will have special playground work this summer under the supervision of his visitor. Three boys have been transferred to the Special Opportunity School where they are classified more satisfactorily. A sixth grade boy who was a frequent truant and on the verge of institutional commitment, has not been absent this year and his work has improved so much in the last three months that his marks are now passing. His teacher will recommend his promotion to seventh grade. Free memberships at the Y. M. C. A. have been generously arranged for two boys, by Mr. Terhune, Boys' Work Secretary, who is a visitor for one of the boys. A tonsilectomy and dental work have been arranged by the school nurse for another boy and glasses have been supplied for two youngsters. Only two have been before the court this year.

In studying this retarded group and the age grade distribution of two schools, we found that mental retardation was a contributing factor to delinquency because of a lack of special training facilities in the schools. A letter to your Board recommending more special classes throughout the city has been already acted upon, I believe.

Dr. Benjamin Frank, State Educational Psychologist, has contributed his services in consultation at the case committee meetings and we are deeply indebted to him. The State mental clinic gave all the psychiatric examinations and Dr. Stone talked to the teachers and school officials about the interpretation of the reports.

This intensive study and follow-up takes much more time than the old "police" enforcement method and to be adequately carried out for all children needing such help, should be supervised by home-school visitors.

Judge Siegler of the Essex County Juvenile Court says in his yearly report, "The court has insisted, and its policy has been concurred in by the school authorities, that truancy and other problems arising out of reactions to school life should be handled within the educational system. Only those problems requiring for adjustment the legal power of the court are referred for consideration." If the Board of Education feels that this work is worth while, it should seriously consider the appointment of at least two additional visitors for the city.

Besides the tabulated routine work listed on the attached sheet, the attendance office has rendered other special services. Sixteen proofs of age were issued for auto and marriage licenses, eight changes of address were reported to the Public Library to aid in finding lost books. Frequently school records are given to the court referee, probation office, detectives, C. O. S., and Board of Children's Guardians. Free memberships at the Y. M. C. A. were secured for two parents of school children where morale needed encouragement, and for six school boys in addition to the two mentioned before. The problem of recreation for unemployed boys in the east end of town was referred to Mr. Schlenter of the Recreation Commission, and he immediately organized activities to install good sportsmanship and keep the boys from constant attendance at the perennial crap games on Hill St. at St. Mary's Ave. (a great attraction for susceptible truants).

There has been a great reduction in the number of children referred to the E. R. A. for clothing — 371 cases this year against 1513 last year. This is due to a more adequate preventive program on the part of the city agencies, and a cash payment basis for the men on the C. W. A. work. The school principals have supplied some clothing after the agencies were obliged to refuse relief to families who were ineligible.

The change in laws under the N. R. A. governing employment of minors has greatly reduced the child workers in Plainfield — and consequently, the enrollment in Continuation School. Thirty are now enrolled. The attendance problem is increased as, this year, the children have to meet once a week in a class on full time attendance. As most continuation school children left grade school because they were retarded and disinterested, they are much less interested to attend one day a week in class work where they feel so at a loss. As a result, they are often absent. This has pulled down the city average attendance considerably. The percent of attendance will be lowered also because of especially cold and stormy winter months and because the follow-up is too slow due to the under-manned investigation service.

The Bonnie Brae Camp offered free membership to four Plainfield school children and this office made the selections. One boy, who was sent last year, was so happy to go again that he brought a friend saying "He is my pal. We go everywhere together. Can't he come along with me?" So the pal is going, too.

Thomas Whitney Surette says, "Whatever you may mean by Education, by learning, and the laws of learning, this is what I mean by it: to secure and establish a set of trustworthy emotions based on a clear perception of the difference between what is good and what is not so good, between what is great and what is less than great, between the best things men have done on the earth, and the second and third best. From that you can go on with the years to any kind of specializing and to any technique; without that, you can go on to a mere series of illusions about yourself and this world and the next." Since this ideal could never be secured by mere compulsion, it seems well to keep attempting a series of adjustments of the educational, social, or individual situation for the problem children needing help.

Respectfully submitted,

DOROTHY S. PUTNAM
